Cradles to Crayons Continued from p. 4

diapers and wipes continue to be the biggest need. “Diapers are expensive, and you go through a lot. Now they include bigger sizes, which are helpful for our older kids.”

While thankful that they have the diapers, school supplies and clothing to use as a “greeting card” to discuss their family reunification and preservation services, Burgos and her coworkers work hard to ensure that their clients’ need for these items will be short-lived.

“Children and Youth puts Diakon in place as a means of support because they understand families need a little help to get back on their feet,” she explains. “We’re hopeful by the time we’re closing their case, that they have the support or budget they need to buy the diapers themselves.”

“This group is so special. My own daughter was admitted to the hospital about a month ago and received one of those pillowcases. It just so happened that the pillowcase matched her pajama pants that she was wearing,” the parent revealed in a Facebook comment. “It was the first time she had smiled in two days. A pillowcase might not seem like much, but to a kid who is scared and sick, it can bring them joy and comfort.”

With awareness of their mission building, Frodsham says increased financial donations are key to their ability to not just make the colorful pillowcases which cost up to $10 each to create, but also to diversify their projects over time.

“Everything is falling into place. Donations are coming in. The people are coming. God is really pleased,” she said, adding that they will eventually look for other ways to serve, such as mending for residents who can’t do it themselves. “It will be fun. People will be helping people. We’ll just let God lead us.”
